Occasions Which Make Silence a Sacrament
 There was a whole world of wisdom in the words of a wise man of old, in the ages of faith ascribed to his Creator: "Be still then and know that I am God." A later philosopher has remarked that no two men can be said to be truly friends unless they are content to look in each other's company without expression of words. There are occasions when silence is the sacrament of faith and reverent joy, the seal and sign of a living union with the Infinite and confident fellowship with our fellow man. It is in the practice of this silence that we learn how to discipline life, and recognize the profundity of the gift of companionship of mere passing companionship, of formal religion and the useless volatility of controversy. We refrain from words because they are inadequate to express our experience, and the certitude of faith and confidence surpasses the powers of speech. "The truth is best spoken not by us, but through us," says a philosopher writing to another big journal. "The witness of true discipleship has its own silent testimony to the truth."
Reverend Publicity
 Anne Stinson, the leading deaconess of his church, was checking in high gear when he ran into another deaconess on the village green.
 "Out it at last, by heck," he chuckled to his friend.
 "What you confess you got, Anne?" asked the other.
 "Just a little deaconess, Ray, but it's a going to make me rich. Every meeting I have in the hall church'll want me."
 "How you figure that out, Anne?" persisted Ray.
 "Well, it's a patent contribution box. Comes full through show of different views. Deacons, half-deacons and quarters full on velvet: sticks and pander drop on a Chinese bell!"—Everybody's Magazine.

Federation Hears Of Many Topics
 The November meeting of the Executive Committee of the Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs was held on Thursday afternoon at the Kingston City Library, Mrs. A. Ray Powley, president, presiding. Following the routine business, Dr. Day, as chairman of the Moving Picture Committee reported that $75,000 had been raised by the moving picture theatre of the land for Florida Relief, among them being theatres of Poughkeepsie and Newburgh. Mrs. Powley supplemented Dr. Day's report by reading from a communication by J. F. Joy showing the entertaining and educational value of the movies in that 750,000 have signed their willingness to write short essays telling "Why I Like the Movies."
 As chairman of the Public Health Committee, Dr. Day reported that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has been doing much for health and hygiene and by its practical help to its industrial policy holders has decreased the mortality of that group 30 per cent.
 Mrs. Harry P. Van Wagenen, the retiring third district chairman, told of the new law enacted at the recent state convention of Federations, whereby the office and duties of the district chairmen will hereafter be eliminated. The work they have been doing will be taken over by directors who will be elected for a period of two years, and they will be elected in each district instead of at the state conventions. Mrs. Van Wagenen also told of the splendid achievements of Mrs. Dickinson, the retiring president of the Federation of Women's Clubs of New York State, in all of her efforts for the betterment of the Federation and particularly along financial lines. She was able to turn over the sum of $1,000 to her successor, Mrs. Purdy.
 Mrs. Powley told of an interesting resolution authorizing the president of the New York State Federation to appoint a committee of Sesquicentennial Living Flags, whose mission it should be to see that all of the states and affiliated clubs cooperate in a proper observance of the adoption of the United States flag, by one or more Sesquicentennial Living flags in 1927.
 Another interesting resolution passed at the state convention was that the various Federations request the highway commissioners of New York to paint the names of rivers conspicuously on all bridges, as a part of a plan being put into operation by Mrs. Grace Goldert, National President of the League of American Pen Women, in the interest of better knowledge of our waterways.
 The Kingston Federation then drew up resolutions of appreciation of Mayor Block and sympathy for his family and the community in their loss by the death of Mayor Block.

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

No static, little local interference and a very light crop of bloopers combined to make good last night. The only handicap to the radio golfers was that tuning was very broad and it was easier to get from two to six stations fighting for their place in the sun than to separate them. Anyone with a nice long aerial such as the local "experts" insist on equipping all sets with, could scarcely avoid these combination, co-operative concerts.
 Any radio set for which the maker specifies a short aerial will be practically spoiled for everything but noise making if an "expert" is permitted to equip it with a long aerial. The only way to stop an "expert" from spoiling your set in this way seems to be to use an axe on his head.
 The old favorite DX from Missouri, WOS, was in its glory last night with a program of old-time dance music.
 After the wave jumpers had signed off, WOC changed from a squeal to great volume and clarity.
 WBAL, the persistent offender, WPG, the occasional offender, and WJAZ, which never before offended, were the most persistent spreaders last night.

Daisy Queen of Flowers
 Asked to name the queen of flowers, the answer is probably would designate the rose, but the bouquet would do no such thing. To him the stamens and petals are the real flowers, and the petals, only the flower's clothes. The make-up of the rose and all its family shows an early stage in flower development. The real queen of the flowers is the daisy. In the daisy the bouquet finds the stages of development of all other flowers. There are about 250 flowers or kinds on each daisy. Even the white or pink-dappled rays are not petals but white flowers, and the yellow lines of the almost complete of many other perfect little flowers, each making a seed.

"Dunking"
 This term is applied to the wetting or soaking of vegetables, often cucumbers and broad beans in salt water. While it is not considered "good form" it is greatly enjoyed by small children and old people, whose teeth are no longer strong enough to cut with such hard self-sufficiency.

Health Talk on Enlarged Glands
 Consult a physician in every case of enlarged glands is the advice of Dr. H. L. K. Shaw, consulting pediatrician of the State Department of Health. This was one of the points he emphasized in a health talk broadcast Friday night from Station WGY.
 "At this season of the year," said Dr. Shaw, "it may not be uncommon for a person to go to bed with a slight cold and wake up the next morning with a hard swelling on one side of the neck. This is a lymphatic gland which has become infected and enlarged. These glands in young children are much more active than in later life. The part they play in the body is not clearly understood, but they seem to act as the first line of defense in resisting the attacks of the invading bacteria of disease. The disease bacteria have to pass through these outposts of the system before they can enter into the body. Fortunately they are usually overwhelmed or filtered out by the resistant action of the lymphatic system.
 "Each locality is connected with its own set of glands which absorb the infective material from the area which they drain. The glands in the neck are known as the cervical lymph glands because of their situation. They are located along the side of the blood vessels of the neck and normally can not be seen, but a small chain of these glands can be detected by rubbing the finger along the sides of the neck. Unless enlarged or tender they have no significance and are no cause for worry.
 "Tonsils and adenoids are part of the lymphatic system and when they are infected or diseased the glands we have been speaking of will become swollen. Infection or inflammation of the delicate mucous membrane back of the nose may extend to the glands of the neck and cause enlargement. Irritation of the skin or of the scalp from various skin diseases often has the same effect.
 "However, it is very important to know the type of bacteria or disease that causes enlargement of the glands. Therefore a physician should always be consulted if a person develops swollen glands. He will ascertain the source and the kind of infection. The swelling of the glands as the result of tonsillitis or catarrhal cold generally appears very suddenly. The gland enlarges, often to the size of an egg, and becomes hard and sensitive.
 "The possibility of these enlarged glands being the result of infection by the tubercle bacillus, the germ that causes consumption, should always be borne in mind although in this case the swelling does not appear suddenly. In early childhood tuberculosis of the lymphatic glands is the most frequent form of that dread disease, but fortunately if discovered early and treated properly the germs will not enter the system and cause a fatal tuberculosis. Authorities state that in over three-fourths of the cases of tuberculosis enlargement of the glands in the neck the disease begins before the child is seven years old and is quite rare after ten years of age. Its frequency at this age is due to drinking raw milk, as such a large percentage of cows have tuberculosis. You can prevent this danger by the simple expedient of boiling or pasteurizing the milk.
 "The tuberculous glands develop slowly and very insidiously. They are not painful and seem to grow smaller at times and then larger. They may soften and break down, as it is called, after a longer or shorter interval. The best medical opinion is that tuberculous glands should be removed by a surgeon before they get a chance to soften.
 "The best treatment for the gland that suddenly appears large and is painful is to keep an ice-bag over it until it becomes smaller. The use of iodine and ointments may irritate, and their use should never be employed except on the advice of a physician. The use of hot poultices or hot packs helps to soften and break down the gland, and this is to be avoided if possible. If the swelling becomes red and soft, it should be opened by a surgeon before it breaks open by itself, for when the latter happens an unsightly scar is left. Most enlarged glands are not tuberculous, but unfortunately many are, so seek expert advice in the treatment of all swollen glands of the neck."

Origin of "Dunking"
 Although some seek the origin of "dunk" in the French "dunquer" ("to give"), and others in the Dutch word "duncken" ("to cleanse"), its real origin is said to have been in the reign of Henry VIII. At that time, in the town of Lincoln, there lived a famous ballad, named Joe Dun. This man was so successful in the matter of collecting debts that it became usual to say "Why don't you Dun him?" meaning "Why don't you send Dun to arrest him?" The use of the word "dunk" in this sense has been in vogue since that time.

Landrith Spoke At C. E. Rally

Dr. Ira T. Landrith, international Christian Endeavor worker and orator, was the speaker at the big Christian Endeavor rally held Friday evening at the First Dutch Church which was attended by delegations from practically every society in the Ulster County Christian Endeavor Union. The rally was one of the largest ever held by the county union.

Preceding the rally a chicken supper was served to Christian Endeavorers at the Fair Street Reformed Church where Dr. Landrith was the guest of honor.

At the rally the Rev. Dr. Lucas Boeve, pastor of the First Dutch Church, presided and introduced Dr. Landrith, who delivered one of the most interesting Christian Endeavor addresses heard here in some time.

At the close of the address President L. C. Dixon of the county union presented the Chickadee Society with an autographed photograph of Dr. Daniel Polling, president of the United Societies of Christian Endeavor, for having the largest number of delegates present who had come the longest distance. An autographed photograph of Dr. Landrith was presented to the society of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church for having the largest number present at the rally.

and Commercial

New York, Nov. 20 (P).—Heavy buying of Baldwin Locomotive, which advanced over eight points to 148 1/2, the highest price in its history, overshadowed all other developments in today's brief session of the market. Most of the other standard industrials rallied in sympathy, although bear traders succeeded in uncovering a few weak spots in scattered sections of the list. In view of the absence of many traders, who were out of the city attending football games, trading was in fairly heavy volume.

The rise in Baldwin was accompanied by the announcement that the road had just received an order for 75 locomotives from the Pennsylvania Railroad. General Motors, which was heavy early, rallied sharply, in sympathy with a three point rise in Mack Trucks. United States Steel common also received better support.

The brisk demand for Federal Light and Traction, which moved up over two points to a new peak price, was associated with rumors of open market buying for control. Sugar shares continued to move up in further response to the higher commodity prices and the downward revision of world crop estimates. A sudden inquiry for Continental Baking "A" also attracted considerable attention. Renewal of selling pressure against Electric Refrigeration sent that stock to a new 1926 low at 39 1/4.

Further accumulation of the St. Paul issues and a five point jump in Pittsburgh and West Virginia featured the trading in railroad shares. The Kansas City Southern, the first road to reach its October earnings, showed a decline of $46.198 in net income compared with the same month last year, which was somewhat of a surprise to Wall Street. The closing was strong. Total sales approximated 700,000 shares.

Pension Fund Drive Planned

North River Presbyterian Delegates Met in Poughkeepsie Friday to Arrange Plans of Campaign to Raise Presbyterian Quota of $25,000.

Delegates from the various churches of the Presbytery of North River met in Poughkeepsie Friday evening and had outlined to them the campaign plan for raising the Presbyterian quota of $25,000 toward the $150,000 Presbyterian pension fund. W. W. Smith of Poughkeepsie is chairman of the Layman's Committee.

The first step in the campaign will be to complete the list of chairmen. On Sunday, December 5, the ministers will be expected to tell their congregations of the campaign, explaining that their contributions will be final since the fund will be self-perpetuating. The campaign will begin the first or second week in December. Each church will be requested to raise as much money as possible, but there will be no assessments made.

Among the members of the Laymen's committee are Frank R. Powley of the Rondout Presbyterian Church and Charles Ramsey of the First Presbyterian Church of this city. The committee is still incomplete.

At the meeting Friday evening a dinner was served which was attended by the Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ellis of the Rondout Presbyterian Church, and John R. Monroe and I. W. Scott of the same church; M. J. Haviland, Fred A. Velle, William J. Velle and the Rev. Matthew C. Carroll of Marlborough and W. G. Hasbrouck of Highland.

Sweet Clover Is Best for Forage

More Valuable for Pasture and Green Manuring Than for Hay Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The recent sudden increase in the growing of sweet clover in the northern United States has brought many inquiries to federal hay inspectors and to hay dealers regarding the marketing of baled sweet-clover hay. The acreage of sweet clover available for harvesting this year is the largest ever known, while the heavy plantings that were made this spring will result in sweet clover being one of the leading forage crops in the country in 1927. Most of this sweet clover will be used for pasture or for plowing under. Some of it, however, will be cut for hay, and the surplus above farm requirements will be offered for sale.

May Not be in Favor.

Sweet-clover hay is not held in high favor in the leading hay markets and dealers report much difficulty in disposing of the sweet-clover hay consigned to them. The United States Department of Agriculture reports that no official standards or grades have been established for sweet-clover hay and that no such grades are contemplated for the immediate future.

The very evident lack of market interest in sweet-clover hay is due to the fact that hay from this crop heretofore offered for sale has been of very low quality and of poor condition. Practically all of it has consisted of an unattractive mass of coarse, woody stems, almost devoid of leaves and fine stems, often badly weathered or moldy, and obviously of low feeding value. The principal buyers of legume hays, including the clovers and alfalfa, are dairymen, and these demand hay that is fine-stemmed and leafy, sound, and of good color and of high palatability and feeding value. Sweet-clover hay may be so produced as to have all of these characteristics, but the type of hay usually placed on the market would be largely wasted if fed to dairy cows. Most buyers will not consider it even for bedding.

Cause of Poor Quality.

The cause of the poor quality of sweet-clover hay lies partly in carelessness in harvesting and partly in the nature of the crop itself. Sweet clover is a biennial plant, making a moderate growth the first year and a very large and rapid growth the second spring. Most of the hay is made from the second-year crop. When harvested at the right time this second-year sweet clover will make very good hay if properly cured, but the curing and storing of sweet clover so as to obtain good quality hay is very difficult. The harvesting must be done just as the flower buds are forming, and the interval during which this occurs is usually not more than three or four days. If cut too early the crop is too succulent and almost impossible to cure without spoiling. If cutting is delayed until the flowers appear the stems become woody. Such stems are coarse and very fibrous and dry so slowly in the swath that most of the leaves wither and fall off before the hay can be put into the barn. If the sweet clover is stacked or placed in the mow at that stage of curing, when the leaves are clinging to the stalks, the stalks will be so soggy as to start a strong ferment that often turns the hay musty and moldy. Unfortunately, the harvesting usually comes at a season of frequent showers and at a time when farmers are too busy to watch the sweet clover closely. As a result very little second-year sweet-clover hay is saved in good condition. Recent investigations have disclosed, furthermore, that second-year sweet-clover hay, which for any reason has become spoiled, is likely to cause severe and often fatal poisoning of cattle. The trouble is thought to be due to a fungus or mold which develops on the inside of the hollow stems.

All of these conditions may be improved somewhat by planting the yellow sweet clover or one of the early white varieties, like the Grady County. In general, however, second-year sweet clover hay is being looked upon with increasing disfavor. Although it may be used in an emergency for home-farm use it should not be cultivated to compete with alfalfa and red clover as market hay.

First-Year Cutting.

A good word should be said, on the other hand, for sweet-clover hay cut the first full following a spring planting. In a good season and on moist soil one and sometimes two cuttings of excellent hay may be obtained in August and early September. This hay is fine-stemmed and leafy, of attractive appearance and feeding value, and comparable in every way to good alfalfa hay. In fact, it has been offered on one market as "near alfalfa." The only objection to first-year sweet-clover hay is the grain stubble which it may contain. If the seedling is cut with a mowing machine.

This can be avoided by planting the sweet clover alone or by cutting it higher than the stubble. Cutting should take place not later than the middle of September, since much seed material in the stems and leaves, is carried to the roots to help fill the storage over winter.

The value of sweet clover for pasture and green manure is very great. In these respects the crop is unequaled. The utility of the crop for hay is doubtful, especially for market hay, when it must compete with such well-known legumes as alfalfa and red clover.

POULTRY

BALANCED RATION
NEEDED FOR HENS

Students of hen science believe that an ordinary bird should be able to produce a thousand eggs if we knew how to give her a fair chance.

She is a wonderful machine, with the embryo of more than a thousand eggs in her make-up, but so many things combine to prevent her from doing her best that she generally fails away short of such production during her few years of life.

If you like to count eggs before they are laid, you may figure the matter out to suit yourself—so many pounds of grain, meat, lime, fat, fiber and water to each dozen eggs—and there you are.

All would be well, and you could begin at once to count your eggs, if it were not for the fact that "something always happens" to prevent the regular machine-like production desired.

Certainly we must be careful to supply the needful ration so that fat, protein, nitrogen, fiber, ash or mineral and water will be fed. This is necessary, because no eggs can be produced if one of these elements is lacking.

The fowls must be kept in condition or they will not "shell out." This is one of the most difficult parts in our whole plan of egg production. The grains are high in nitrogen and protein. Meat scrap, bone and meal are high in fat and protein. When the flock is out on the range, young and old pick up what they instinctively seek as needful.

Some of the prepared feeds are mixed so that just about the right proportion of each needed element is in the ration. Sometimes the birds do not seem to like the ration as mixed for them, so the plans of the scientists do not work out.

Molting Period Is GoodIndex of Value of Hen

Hens that are in the midst of molting do not, as a rule, lay. The time of the year when molting takes place is, therefore, a reliable index of the value of the hen to the flock for the reason that a hen molting in wrong season, when she should be laying, can deprive the flock of more profit than would be the case had she molted early enough to be laying at the peak of high prices.

The "early molter" is not, however, a good layer, as a rule. Molting usually starts with the neck, then the body and finally the tail and the wings. It takes, usually, three months for the molting process to be fully completed. While it would seem that the early molters would be the best winter layers, actual experiments have proved that such is not the case.

These texts held by various expert scientists have brought out the fact that egg production controls the molt rather than the molt controlling the egg production. So long as laying is continued the molting will be postponed. And it is quite universally conceded that the late molter is
